Why: AAHAR 2005 is the 20th annual international exhibition for food and food processing equipment in India. AAHAR provides an unparalleled venue to reach Indian food buyers because it is the largest food trade show in all of India. It provides an excellent opportunity to introduce new products to the emerging Indian market.

India had historically maintained a highly restrictive import market for food products. In recent years, the Indian government's gradual trade liberalization has provided market access for an increasing number of food products thereby, offering new market opportunities. As of April 1, 2001, India, under its WTO obligations, removed quantitative restrictions on imports of all food products.

AAHAR provides an opportunity to establish your company's presence in the hitherto closed Indian market by introducing your products to potential importers, distributors, representatives and joint venture partners attending the show. More than 200 Indian and foreign exhibitors and about 20,000 business visitors from India and abroad participated in last year's event. While several foreign products were presented in individual booths, the USDA/FAS had the only organized country pavilion with ten exhibitors and two American Café participants.

The

Market: Are you ready to spotlight your products in a market where imports are just beginning?

India, with a population of more than one billion and a vibrant economy growing annually at 5-6 percent in the last few years, is potentially a huge and emerging market for imported food products. Although tariffs remain high at 30 to 60 percent on most products, market opportunities for high value consumer food products have expanded in recent years. India's large and growing middle class market may vary from 50-200 million depending on the income levels, product, and pricing. Nevertheless, with the increasing urbanization and exposure to western culture, a segment of 10-50 million Indian consumers exist, largely concentrated in the major metropolitan cities, whose consumption behaviors are comparable to western standards. Growing health consciousness among the middle class will further spur imports of consumer food products. In addition, the growing number of fast food/western style restaurants and the vibrant domestic food processing industry has created substantial markets for an increasingly broad range of food ingredients. Indian consumers regard U.S. products favorably and strongly associate them with high quality.

Best Products Prospects: almonds, pistachios, fresh fruits (apples, grapes, pears), prunes, chocolate, cookies, fruit juices, sauces, spreads, salad dressings, condiments, cheese, wine etc.
